Spiritual and Pastoral Care

Information for patients, carers, family and support persons

At The Melbourne Clinic we value non-judgemental acceptance and the importance of spiritual health in recovery. To acknowledge this we proudly offer spiritual and pastoral care to our clients.

'Spiritual care is the provision of assessment, support and guidance in matters of a person's beliefs, traditions, values and practices that enables the person to access their own spiritual resources.' (ICD codes Australian version 2017).

Spiritual and Pastoral Care:

- Pays attention to the spiritual nature of the person, and to the spiritual issues that arise in illness, suffering, life and death
- Is person-centered, provided in a one-on-one relationship, and makes no assumptions about personal convictions, life orientation or spiritual identity
- Seeks to identify a person's spiritual resources and needs, in order to reflect on and explore their hopes and concerns
- Enables individuals to work through issues of meaning, purpose, connectedness and a sense of belonging
- Recognises that every person has a unique way of finding meaning through individual experiences, beliefs, culture, history and tradition
- Provides a range of services through group discussion and support, counselling and education and specific spiritual care (including prayer).
